Printers come in all shapes, sizes, and types, like wireless, air printer, all-in-one, inkjet, laser, and photo printers and all are ideal for different uses.

Office Printers

Ensuring your office has a reliable and versatile printer to cope with the ongoing demands of the working day is key to a successful working environment and with our range of printers from top brands including Canon, HP and Epson, you will be sure to find one that suits your team. Laser printers use static electricity to attract powdered ink, which is perfect for an office environment. Providing both quick and high quality printing, laser printers are also great for cutting costs by using toner rather than ink to offer a longer lasting alternative. You'll also find a great range of printers for use in a home office environment. When working from home, connectivity is key and our range of inkjet printers provide just that. Affordable, reliable and with the ability to print at the highest of quality, in recent years inkjet printers have come on leaps and bounds. If it is more than just printing you're after why not try our all-in-one printers, providing you with the ability to photocopy, fax and scan as well as printing in the highest quality. Whether you are looking for wireless technology, versatility or a cost cutting option for your home or work office you'll be sure to find a suitable printer in our range.

Home Printers

Inkjet printers use droplets of ink from a cartridge, and often offer the best option for printing at home due to their affordability and versatility. An air printer for example, connects wirelessly to your phone or computer to transfer documents to print, whereas an all-in-one printer can fax, scan, copy, and print. Ease of use and setup is also vital for printing at home which makes our range of wireless inkjet printers perfect for the whole family. No wires, just simply print using your Bluetooth or WIFI connection. Whether it's something fun for the kids, an assignment for university or vital documents you need whilst working from home, you'll be ready to go in no time. Whichever type of printer you need for your home or office, you can rely on Ryman. Our range includes the best printers from leading printer brands including Brother, Epson, HP, Canon, Samsung, and more.

Printer FAQs

Which Printer is Best?

There are two main types of printers; Inkjet Printers and Laser Printers. Inkjet printers are usually the traditional choice for home use suitable for low volume printing whereas lasers are ideally used within offices for high volume printing. Inkjet printers however are available for wireless use as well as business. Check out our Printer Buying Guide for more detail to help with your printer purchase.

What Does a Printer Do?

A printer is an output device connected to your laptop, computer, or phone. A printer prints paper documents containing both text and images. Learn the five reasons why printing is still necessary in the Digital Age.

About Us

In the October of 1893, a young Henry Ryman flipped over the 'Open' sign to his brand new shop on Great Portland Street, London. Ryman Stationery was officially born. From then to now, we've had over 120 years' experience in providing essential stationery items, and expert product knowledge.

Over the years, we've grown, developed and extended our offering to provide the very best in stationery, office supplies, technology and office furniture. And that 'Open' sign that Henry turned over all those years ago is now permanently in place with our fast and helpful website.

With over 200 stores and our online shop, our business accounts and special discounts for students, our unrivalled product knowledge, range and service, and our commitment to giving you the very best products, we're still just as passionate about stationery as Henry was on that very first day. You can rely on Ryman.

Christmas 2019

- Group Like-for-like (LFL) sales decline of 1.3% comprised of positive sales at Robert Dyas, flat sales at Ryman and a reduction in sales at Bux Avenue
- Online sales mix of total business increased to 21.8% for the Group, with Bux Avenue now approaching 50% of total sales and strong e-commerce growth at Ryman, London Graphic Centre and Robert Dyas
- Ryman: Good performance with total revenue increasing by 1.4% to £129.9m, delivering an increase in EBITDA of 6.5% (FY18: £10.3m) reflecting focus on introduction of new categories, development of related services and customer engagement in store
- Robert Dyas: Strong performance with total revenue increasing by 6.3% to £131.6m; EBITDA increased to £1.6m (FY18: £0.3m) reflecting strong online growth following introduction of new categories and a good performance in outdoor categories during summer peak
- Bux Avenue: The business experienced challenging trading conditions throughout the year, which have continued post the period end, resulting in an ongoing strategic and operational review of the business

Theo Paphitis Comment

Looking back at the prior financial year and this Christmas, our Group has delivered a resilient performance in what has been the most challenging retail environment we have ever experienced, underpinned by consumer uncertainty and declines in footfall. I am pleased that Ryman and Robert Dyas, as heritage brands on our high streets, have traded well over the prior financial year. Both businesses put in good performances, growing sales and profits as they focused on strong retail execution and category development, both online and in store. Christmas trading was also creditable for both businesses.

Although a small part of our overall Group, we were delighted to see the London Graphic Centre deliver remarkable LFL growth and online sales following its increased focus on product ranging, customer service and engagement, including the introduction of art-based activities in store.

Bux's online sales performance during the Christmas period tells its own story, accounting for almost 50% of total retail sales. As a greater proportion of fashion sales migrate online in the UK, it's clear that the relevance of shopping centres to fashion retailing – and particularly Bux's core demographic of 18-30 year old females – is dramatically different from what it was when we launched the business in 2011. It is not a surprise, therefore, that trading has been most challenging in the majority of our 30 Bux Avenue shopping centre stores, which has contributed towards a double-digit decline in LFL sales in recent months.

The significant costs of marketing your brand to customers in these locations no longer makes sense, and one of the most significant factors we must address is the rents we are paying across our shopping centre destinations. Bux is still paying significantly above average market rents whilst competitors and co-occupiers have been able to completely realign their rental cost base, often through CVAs. This does not tally with the overall experience we have had with our other businesses located on the high street where we have made some progress in renegotiating rents back towards the market average following constructive discussions with a number of landlords.

We have seen progress with the turnaround plan we implemented at Bux last year and the reaction to our new designs and products has been encouraging. The contribution to Bux's ranges from product designed by our in house team, led by Zoe Price Smith is increasing and will be entirely influenced by them from the Autumn this year. However, the lower than planned growth in Bux's overall business, partially impacted by lower footfall experienced at these locations, as well as an unsustainable cost base has meant that we are accelerating a strategic and operational review of the business, leaving no stone unturned. We will look to address our cost base, in particular our rents, as well as addressing the appropriate mix of channels to match the changing needs of our customers. Given the significant importance of the review, this will be led by me personally, supported by our Group board. The publication of Bux's financial statements will follow pending the outcome of this review.

As I have previously said, the lack of reform and focus on business rates by the Government and other authorities continues to frustrate us and puts at risk one of the key sectors for the UK economy. However, I am a firm believer that both physical and online retail have a future and we are seeing that we are able to deliver further growth through our heritage brands, Ryman and Robert Dyas, through our e-commerce and other new channels. I would like to thank our loyal colleagues and suppliers for their continued support and we remain confident in the strength of our Group and its collective portfolio of brands.
